

PlurEOL: Pluralistic approaches for learning environments

The potential of pluralistic approaches to languages and cultures

This overview can inspire links between language education and the school's education policy when developing language friendly environments.

This is an output of the project "Learning environments where modern languages flourish" (2016-2019) of the European Centre for Modern Languages (ECML). The ECML is a Council of Europe institution promoting excellence in language education in its member states.
